OVERVIEW

This workshop equips participants to understand, apply, and uphold institutional codes of conduct with clarity and integrity. It strengthens both individual responsibility and organizational cohesion—ensuring that values are translated into everyday behaviors across all levels of operation. Participants will examine the purpose, structure, and implementation of a code of conduct in various institutional settings, including government, NGOs, international agencies, and the private sector. Topics include professional ethics, conflict of interest, confidentiality, misuse of authority, anti-harassment measures, whistleblowing protocols, and the consequences of misconduct.

Audience

Designed for public officials, NGO staff, corporate managers, compliance officers, HR professionals, legal advisors, and administrators responsible for ethics, internal controls, or organizational development. Also valuable for educators and trainers developing internal policies.

Instructors

Led by ethics officers, compliance consultants, organizational governance experts, and legal professionals with experience in drafting, implementing, and training on codes of conduct across sectors. Instructors provide both policy insight and practical tools.
