OVERVIEW

This workshop offers a strategic introduction to the interplay between diplomacy and geopolitics, helping professionals understand how states manage power, conflict, and alliances. It equips participants with the tools to navigate global dynamics and apply diplomatic strategies in complex international environments.

Audience

This workshop is intended for diplomats, political leaders, policy advisors, international relations professionals, and senior decision-makers involved in foreign affairs, security, and strategic planning. It is especially valuable for those working in embassies, international organizations, governmental institutions, and think tanks who seek to enhance their ability to interpret global power shifts and apply diplomatic tools in a geopolitical context.

Instructors

The workshop will be led by a select team of seasoned diplomats, geopolitical analysts, and international relations scholars with extensive experience in foreign policy, conflict resolution, and global strategy. Their combined academic expertise and practical fieldwork ensure that participants gain both theoretical depth and real-world insights into the evolving dynamics of diplomacy and geopolitical affairs.
